President Bush and His African Political Safari

The most ironic thing we have seen in awhile was the sight of American President George W. Bush with his wife along with Senegalese President Abdoulaye Wade – with his Caucasian wife walking through the streets of Senegal – an African nation.

President Bush's words were very eloquent, however they are empty words that represent nothing more than lip service to place a positive humanitarian spin on what amounts to a politically choreographed safari on the African continent.

The real Bush is against what many refer to as Affirmative Action, he refuses to meet with the key leaders within the Black community who wield influence and have plans for economic development for the African continent. The real Bush has no plans to counter the double-digit unemployment that plagues the Black community.

The Africans appeared not to be fooled and no one else should be fooled either.

According to the New York Times, the motorcade that carried Bush "passed hundreds of Senegalese people, most of whom "showed little emotion."

Of course we all know that the speech in which Bush allegedly "denounced" slavery, would not have had any invited guests who would have protested Bush and his appearance or attempted to raise any real issues that plague the millions suffering on the African continent.

Keep in mind however, it is not up to George W. Bush to solve the problem of the Africans on the African continent. It is the responsibility of the descendants of its ancestors all across the globe.

Race and Sports and Genetics – No Double Standard

The manager of the Chicago Cubs professional baseball team Dusty Baker said something that everyone knows is correct.

It is a well-established fact that there are biological differences that exist in different races of people. All men are created equal however all men are not created equally. Some are made to excel others.

Apparently we at the TEI clearly see the world through more of a racial prism than many others, however, we fail to see why there was so much controversy generated over what was said.

There are many – mostly in the media – who claim that a double standard exists citing the comments of Jimmy "The Greek" Snyder as an example. They maintain that if Dusty Baker was a white man, he would be fired immediately as was Jimmy "The Greek" for comments seen by many as similar.

You may or may not recall that Jimmy "The Greek" Snyder made comments regarding the powerful bodies of Black people while making note of the differences in the muscular structure of Blacks and whites. He was summarily fired and branded as a racist, not by Blacks, but by Liberal whites. It is the position of the TEI that that Jimmy "The Greek" Snyder should not have been fired for simply stating an opinion, whether you agree with him or not.

Jimmy "The Greek" was a sports better and sports analyst who rose to an influential level in the sports world. Dusty Baker is the manager of a baseball team. These individuals are far removed from those who influence policy and shape the minds of society.

People of the world do not look to these people to form their attitudes on race. They base their racial attitudes on their experiences and what they are taught. It is an overreaction by the media and should be kept in proper context.

With all that being said, Baker's comments were right on the money and we are extremely glad that he did not backpedal, back track or recant stating that he was misquoted and taken out of context. In fact, today when asked about his previous comments, he again stood his ground and then added some livelier statements almost certain to be considered controversial. Surely this will incense those who are calling for his dismissal.

At last, someone who says what he means and means what he says. He spoke truth. He isn't the first and won't be the last to be persecuted for speaking truth.

Only those who are intellectually lazy fail to seek truth. Only those who are intellectually dishonest ignore truth when it is presented to them, even if it indicts them or chips away at the foundation of what they previously held as truth.

Alleged White Supremacist Goes on a Shooting Rampage

In Mississippi, a Caucasian Lockheed Martin Worker with White-Supremacist view murders several Black workers. Co-workers stated that it was widely known that he held animosity against Blacks and had made previous threats. This time, apparently he carried them out. More to follow as more facts come forth.

We will have more to say on all of the above-mentioned topics within the next few days and explore all of these topics in detail during the next few broadcasts. Continue to follow the news and look beneath the surface of what is presented as truth. These are just primers.
